Lives there a man with soul so dead Who never to himself has said, I must protect my loving wife, And so I must assure my life. I would not be a soulless boor. Who dies and leaves his family poor. I'll pay a premium every year, And then my leved ones need not fear But what, when I am in my grave, They'll have far more than I can save; Or if when old I living be. The money will provide for me, And an old age, serone and bright And peaceful as a summer night, Shall lead me to the grave. If you would be another such. And wish to find out just how much Premium cost to you will be, Write, phone, or call on us or me.

Now that the United States and Great Britain appear inclined quarrel it may be of some interest to briefly recapitulate what in connection with the question of the light and pass regulations. the trouble is all about. British Guiana is a colony in South America, extending from 9 deg. to 1 deg. north latitude and from with mails, &c., from San Francisco to the 30th ultimo, has arrived at Yokuhama, and left for, 57 deg. to 62 deg. west longitude, and was ceded by the Dutch to Great Britain in this port yesterday morning via Nagasaki. 1814. The following concise summary of the present position is given in the last issue of the Review, of Reviews :-"The whole question in dispute turns round "a very narrow point-viz., whether the debatable land between British Guiana "and Venezuela begins at the Essequibo "River or at the Schomberg line, which lies " about half-way between the Essequibo and "the Oringco. We are willing to arbitrate "upon everything that we consider to be "fairly in dispute, but we hold that the ""region between the Schomberg line and "the Essequibo River, which has never been "occupied by the Venezuelan Government. Clearly, here is a question not for "one arbitration, but for two. The prior "question that has to be decided is as to "what territory should form the subject of "arbitration. After that preliminary de-"cision has been given, then the question "so limited would come up before the Court, " which would go into the whole mutter. This. JAPANESE MERCHANTS AND DIRECT FOREIGN TRADE.

At the suggestion of the Department for Agriculture and Commerce the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce has been holding an investigation into the prospects of direct export and import by Japanese merchants. The result of an examination by the committee appointed has now been reported to the Chambor of Commerce, and will be forthwith communicated to the Department. The causes that impede the development of direct foreign trade are enumerated as

(1) Imperfection of the credit system; (2) high rates of interest in Japan as compared with those ruling in the West; (3) the ignorance of the Japanese merchants engaged in direct trade as to the condition of commerce abroad; (4) want of uniformity in the quality of Japanese manufactures and frequent deterioration of manufacturing processes.

Recommendations were drawn up as to the means of removing these impediments. > THE THEATRICAL TRAGEDY IN SYDNEY.

DETAILS OF THE DAORE MURDER AND Below we give a summarised account of the Dacre tragedy taken from the Sydney Daily Welegraph of the 18th November :--

One of the most shocking tragedies that have occurred in Sydney for some time took place yesterday ofternoon at No. 129, Macquarie Street which is occupied by Mrs. Hinton, and is known as one of the fashionable boarding houses in Sydney. Arthur Dacre, an English actor of derable repute, shot his wife, a fine actress, whose stage name was Miss Amy Resello, dead, and out his throat in a most determined manner. As far, as is at present known, the only motive that can be assigned for the terrible deed was the colony. They had been staying at Mrs. I found that Dr. MacLaurin and Dr. Jarvie Hinton's place for about two months, almost ever Hood had already arrived. Both of the unforsince they returned from their New Zealand tunato persons were then quite dead. The lady tour, and did not spen to be in anything like had been shot twice in the left breast with a small financial straits, as they had paid for everything bull dog revolver, which I saw. Two of the

Both of them had been unwell for some days past, and unable to attend rehearsal. It was noticed that on Saturday Mrs. Daere looked very pale indeed; but her husband played his part in "The Land of the Mon" at the Theatre Royal, and it was remarked by other ladies and gentlemen in the company that he never performed better. When leaving the theatre they informed the manager that they expected to be quite well enough to play in "The Silence of Dean Maitland," which was to have been staged for the first time to-night.

The last person to see Mr. and Mrs. Daore alive was the former's dresser. He first called on them yesterday afternoon, and then Mr. Dacro was ongaged in letter writer. Having finished his letters, Mr. Daore gave them to the dresser, and latter on asked him to place his hand on the Bible and swear that, if ever he was asked to give evidence in regard to them, he would always state that he had been well treated, and never received any injustice from him. Of course the promise was readily given, although the dresser regarded it as extraordinary. As he was leaving the room Mrs. Dacre shook hands with him and bade him "good hye," a thing she had never done before. There were other letters to be taken, but Mr. Dacre told the man to come back for them at 7 o'clock. Presumably Mr. Dacre then finished his letters, and having done so began his awith work by loading three chambers of a small live-barrelled revolver, but in doing so he must have placed the first of the three charges immediately under the hammer. He put the muzzle of the weapon close to his wife's left breast and fired twice. Either shot would have been justantly fated. The third cartridge he had clearly intended for his own quietus, as will shortly be seen; but in his excitement he had evidently forgotten that when he pulled the trigger to fire the first shot the chamber would revelve one barrel, and the first cartridge would move on. Having killed his wife, no doubt he then turned the weapon upon himself and drow the trigger, but the he thought the cartridge had missed fire, and thereupon did not examine the revolver, for the unexploded charge was found preceding in order the two empty shells. He then must have gone to a cupboard outside the room, where. some of his boxes were stored, in search of his razors. While runmaging these trunks he broke down a shelf upon which a quantity of toilet crockery was placed, and it was the crash of these articles that first suggested to the other inmates of the house that the usual quietude of the Sunday afternoon had been in any way broken in upon. Having secured a razor, Mr. Dacro returned to his own room, and cut his Uroat across from left to right. Apparently he feared he had been unsuccessful in his attempt at self-destruction, for then he pencilled tremulously his last message on a sheet of notopaper-"God let us die fogether. I thought there was a last shot left." TERRIBLE SCENE AND A LINGERING DEATH.

The ringing of an electric bell communicating with the room in which the tragedy was enacted was the first indication that the number of the house received that anything was amiss. One of the housemaids, Mary Collins, was hastoning to see what was required, when a crash was head on the top floor. Martha Hope, another of the housemaids, rushed to the door of the Dacres' room and attempted to open it. The door was, however, looked, and, hearing someone greaning inside, she called out, "Open the door, Mr. Dacre, it is only Martha." Dacre replied in an indistinct voice. "For God's sake, burst it open." There was a quantity of broken china lying about in the passage, which had fallen from a shelf, and fearing that something dreadful had happened the girl called Henry Hinton, the landlady's son. Hinton being unable to open the door, climbed from the balcony, of the adjoining room and entered by the French window. He was horrified to see Mrs. Dacre's body lying on the bed, and Dacre standing in front of the fireplace; holding on to the mantelpiece with one hand and bleeding from a wound in the threat. He was calling out, "Oh, the agony," and was evidently suffering great pain. While the lad was raising the alarm the unfortunate man staggered across the (room towards the bed, evidently with the intention of lying on the bed beside the body of his wife. He stumbled as he neared the bed and fell, but managed to place himself in a sitting postureon the floor at the foot of the bed. Here he was when Mr. A. H. Prince, one of the

Meanwhile Minton had rushed into the street and informed a police officer who was passing. Several doctors were also summoned, and within a couple of minutes Drs. MacLaurin and Fiashchi and Constables Yates and Dege were in the room in which the tragedy occurred. A hasty examination of the bodies showed that Mrs. Daere had been dead about half an hour, while Duore was still alive, but in such a weak condition that he died almost immediately. On a chair beside the bed was found the piece of blood stained notepaper containing the message quoted above. The room in which the tragedy occurred presented a horrible appearance when the bodies were found. Everything was covered with blood, and the bed was saturated. In a corner of the room was a washing basin almost half full of blood, and in this was found the razor with which Mr. Dacre cut his throat. Upon the doctors seeing the bodies and pronouncing life extinct, the police officers removed Dacre's body from the foot of the bed, and placed it on the floor alongside that of his wife.

There was certainly nothing to suggest to me that she was a consenting party to the tragedy. The gontleman had out his own throat with a razor. There was a deep would on the left side of the neck, severing the carotid artery, and death must have ensued very shortly after it was inflicted. There had been a great flow of blood, for it was in pools in various parts of the room, showing that after outting his throat he must have moved about. Evidently, he had wounded: himself over the wash hand basin, as it contained a quantity of blood, and also the razor which he had used."

President Cleveland, in his message to Congress, states that Great Britain has not yet replied to the American Note of July last protesting against the enlargements of British Guiana contrary to the rights and will of Venezuela, and proposing arbitration. Referring to Armenia, he hopes that the prompt and effective action of the Powers will not be delayed. The President then goes on to say that the country is financially ill, and will require heroic treatment. He deprecates free Watson & Co. A. S coinage under the guise of bimetallism. In conclusion, he urges the necessity for maintaining neutrality in the Cuban question. VOTE OF CONFIDENCE IN COUNT CRISPI'S
